Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Culture and Applied Geography, grade: 2,7, University of Osnabrück, 6 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: With this piece of work I want to explain the British School System. I will start with a brief overview on the history of British schools from the medieval times and then show the development of the modern education System from World War II until now.

Talking of the development of the British Education System terms like 'pendulum of curricula control' are often used as the state's control on the school curriculum grew and shrunk over the period from 1862 until 1988. I will try to describe the course that this 'pendulum' took.
