Laurel and James met and fell in love almost instantly. They spent every waking minute together when they were young and after high school graduation, they made sure they attended the same college. During their junior year, James proposed to Laurel and she, of course, said yes. They were elated that their love had endured high school and college.

Both successful in their respective careers, James and Laurel began to spend an increasing amount of time working, hiding behind their smart phones, watching television, and it was no surprise when they began to drift away from each other.

Their level of intimacy over the years had become mundane, mechanical, and obligatory rather than passionate, carefree, and loving. There was no question that they were still in love with one another, but the newness and excitement of the marriage had worn off and like a stick of chewing gum that had lost its flavor, they both needed something more.

Little did James know that Laurel had an itch that needed scratching and that itch would come in the form of a fascinating, beautiful woman, the adventure was about to begin!
